Someone once said that "you first must please yourself" when producing high quality photography. This is probably true in other disciplines as well. But if it is true in the photographic medium, that premise must be based on more than self satisfaction. Presumably, when one is pleased by one's work, it is directly related to the highest level of achievement sought by the artist. After all that work reflects the experience and ability of the artist, so, being pleased with it is just. Even when on a commercial job, I look
